Hearing of the Public – GHHS Students Tully Downer and Maggie Herlihy

We are both student leaders of the Bobcat Anti-Racism Collective (BARC). We are grateful to be in a school that offers clubs like BARC and we want to share our gratitude for the school's continued support of honesty in education.

BARC is a group of student leaders that actively try to combat racism and raise awareness of past or ongoing issues concerning race. We have hosted movie nights, general meetings, have provided resources to combat bills in our legislature, and more.

Specifically, we have welcomed the second speaker of BARC's speaker series in the fall, Suzanne Bradford-Kounta. It went so well that we have continued our relationship with her. Some students have toured and received a free performance at the Lincoln Theater, where Ms. Bradford-Kounta is the director. She has joined us for one of our general meetings. Our next speaker of the series visits us this month. His name is Ben Jealous and he's the former president of the NAACP.

There are house bills being proposed across the country, including Ohio, to curtail honesty in education and the vital discussion of divisive concepts. This recently has been coupled with the dangerous epidemic of book banning. As BARC members, along with many other students, we believe it is valuable to learn about the past in order to acknowledge our previous mistakes and prevent them from repeating. Ignoring issues such as racism does not make it go away.

Given the current climate of dishonesty, ignorance, and ambiguity in the United States, we are especially glad that our school does its best to promote a holistic curriculum, characterized by diverse representation and valuable discussions, even about hard things at times, which helps us grow as critical thinkers. Thank you.

Discussion

Mrs. Gephart mentioned that in the building and department reports, she read about the district's consultant, Dr. Tom Frye, assisting the district with evaluating diagnostic assessment results and she asked Superintendent Culp for more information on how that is done. Superintendent Culp explained that Dr. Frye has a gift for analyzing the data and working collaboratively with teachers to design their teaching strategies accordingly.
